Share with us a personal memory of the location:	I remember when my family first moved to St. George from California that we lived on 700 E. by then Dixie State College in an apartment. We were a family of 6 of Mexican-Americans who had moved here because my dad started a new job at the Bloomington Country Club. I remember the apartment was really small, possibly 1 bedroom, and we were a happy bunch living in close quarters. I only knew Spanish at this time, but I went out into the parking lot with my sisters and they had made friends with some neighbors that went to school with them. They were a black family, and we quickly became friends. I remember my first English words I learned was the cool slang my older siblings and neighbors were saying out in the parking lot. After this, we moved near 2450 park but I'll never forget my first friends in St. George and how the same apartment I was growing up in is now specifically student housing and has been transformed into a campus community.
